Commissioner Truesdell's Reasons Favoring House Bill 6895.

PROVIDES UNIFORM METHODS

Assessment for Fire Plugs Has No Effect on Beveaues of the Water Department-Lease for the District Building Extended for Another Year-Hearing on Bicycle Speed.

Commissioner Truesdell yesterday submitted to the President his views on the watermain assessment bill. He says that he is unable to agree with his colleagues on House bill No. 6895 "to regulate water-main assess cents in the District of Columbia."

He says that there is but one important question raised by this bill and that is the change in the method or plan of assessing the cost of water mains on abutting property from 1% cents per square foot of area to $1.25 per linear or front foot. As to which of these two systems is the more equitable and desirable there is room for a difference of opinion.

The other question raised by the Commis ioners as to whether they would have power under the bill to assess for cost of fire plugs and whether the power to erect those appli ances would not by necessary implication be revoked arises in his judgment from a misconception of both the proposed and existing law. The power to assess the expense of the erection of fire plugs is included in the powe to assess the cost of watermains, and no sepa rate tax or assessment is or can be levied for fire plugs. The assessment under existing law must be at the rate of 1½ cents per square foot, whether fire plugs are erected or not.

The power to lay water mains and erect fire plugs, he holds, is derived from the annual appropriation for the District of Columbia. He says that the fear of his associates that the bill would deprive the Commissioners of the power to erect fire plugs is groundless and that the power to assess for fire plugs is wholly nominal and has no effect upon the wholly hominal and has no effect upon the revenues of the water department whatever. If taken out of the existing law it would not reduce those revenues a penny, nor if added to the pending bill, would it increase them. The only thing of importance to be considered in connection with the bill is: Does it affects ford a more equitable system of assessing the ost of laving water mains than that now provided by law? INEQUALITIES OF THE PRESENT SYSTEM. Under the present system the cost of laying water main in front of two lots, one 50x100, and the other 50x200, is the same in each case, while the tax levied is twice as much on one lot as on the other. And yet the water main gives no greater benefit to one lot more than to the other. In many cases this method of to the other. In many cases this method of assessment works even greater injustice. Some lots in the suburbs, where greater depth is desirable than in the city, have been laid off 300 feet or more in depth, while on the same streets other lots are less than 160 feet deep. In some cases the owners of deep lots have sub-divided a shallow strip along the front or have sold a few feet off the front previous to the levying of a water main assessment for the purpose of evading the tax.

This has encouraged the laying off of shallow lots both fin and out of the city, a practice that should be discouraged as much as possi-The average depth of lots is about 100 feet, and on this basis the revenue derived by the District would be about the same under either system, and the amount collected would be ample to defray the cost. Under the system of assessing by the linear foot, should a deep lot be given another from by the opening of new street or alley wherein a water main hould be laid, a new tax would be levied on should be said, a new tax would be levied on that front. By the operation of the present law this tax is anticipated, sometimes many years, so that the property holder is taxed for a water main perhaps ten years before it is laid. This is contrary to the law requiring ever kicks about anything you're asked to do."

In a few minutes she was ready. In one of the foul-smelling lodging-houses whose vitiated atmosphere is breathed by scores of so-called human beings she found the woman, who had been pronounced unabled to "live the night out."

She had evidently been on a prolocect.

She drew it off her shrunken finger and Miss Titus took it. One glance at the words engraved therein was sufficient to tell her surmises were correct. It was his wife. She had always wondered about the woman whose life had clashed with hers in some time to learn what kind of a woman he had loved. And that was the way she found her.
